B.

I guess I was a little bored. For the past hour, I'd been on the phone with Daniele, the head of my office in Italy, reviewing our latest purchases of Italian gold, Murano glass and Italian-made shoes and handbags.

"Daniele," I said, "What is the hottest jewelry in Italy right now?"

His reply? Woven gold bracelets studded with jewelry. He texted me some photos and I knew immediately that this was jewelry that Raffinato just had to have.

RAFFINATO IS ONE OF AMERICA'S LARGEST RETAILERS OF ITALIAN-MADE JEWELRY

Presenting the Italiano Fantasia Bracelets, two designs that are prime examples of Italy's finest artisanship. Each of these bracelets includes more than 20 brilliant cut gems of Diamond*Aura*®, our Ultimate Diamond Alternative®, in a setting finished with 18 karat Italian gold.

What is Diamond*Aura*®? Why, it's a sparkling marvel that rivals even the finest diamonds (D Flawless) with its transparent color and clarity: Both are so hard they can cut glass. Don't believe me? The book "Jewelry and Gems: The Buying Guide," praised the technique used in our diamond alternative: "The best diamond simulation to date, and even some jewelers have mistaken these stones for mined diamonds," it raved.

The best part about these bracelets? The price. Because of our longstanding connections in Arezzo, the mecca of Italian goldsmithing, we can offer both bracelets together for just $99, a fraction of the price you'll pay anywhere else for similar jewelry.

Order today. These bracelets are one of our hottest sellers this year, and with disruptions in the supply chain, we can only guarantee that we have ~~1,273~~ 861 of these bracelets on hand for this ad.

Make the next gift you give your loved one a trip to Italy with the Italiano Fantasia Bracelets, stunning accessories that are sure to turn heads.

THE BIG PICTURE

LEVELING THE FIELD

"Because it is a long journey to this moment, I am naturally indebted to countless numbers of people," said Lilies of the Field star Sidney Poitier, after Anne Bancroft opened the envelope on April 13, 1964, and he became the first Black actor to win an Academy Award. "I like to think it will help someone," he'd muse. "But I don't believe my Oscar will be a sort of magic wand [for Black performers]."

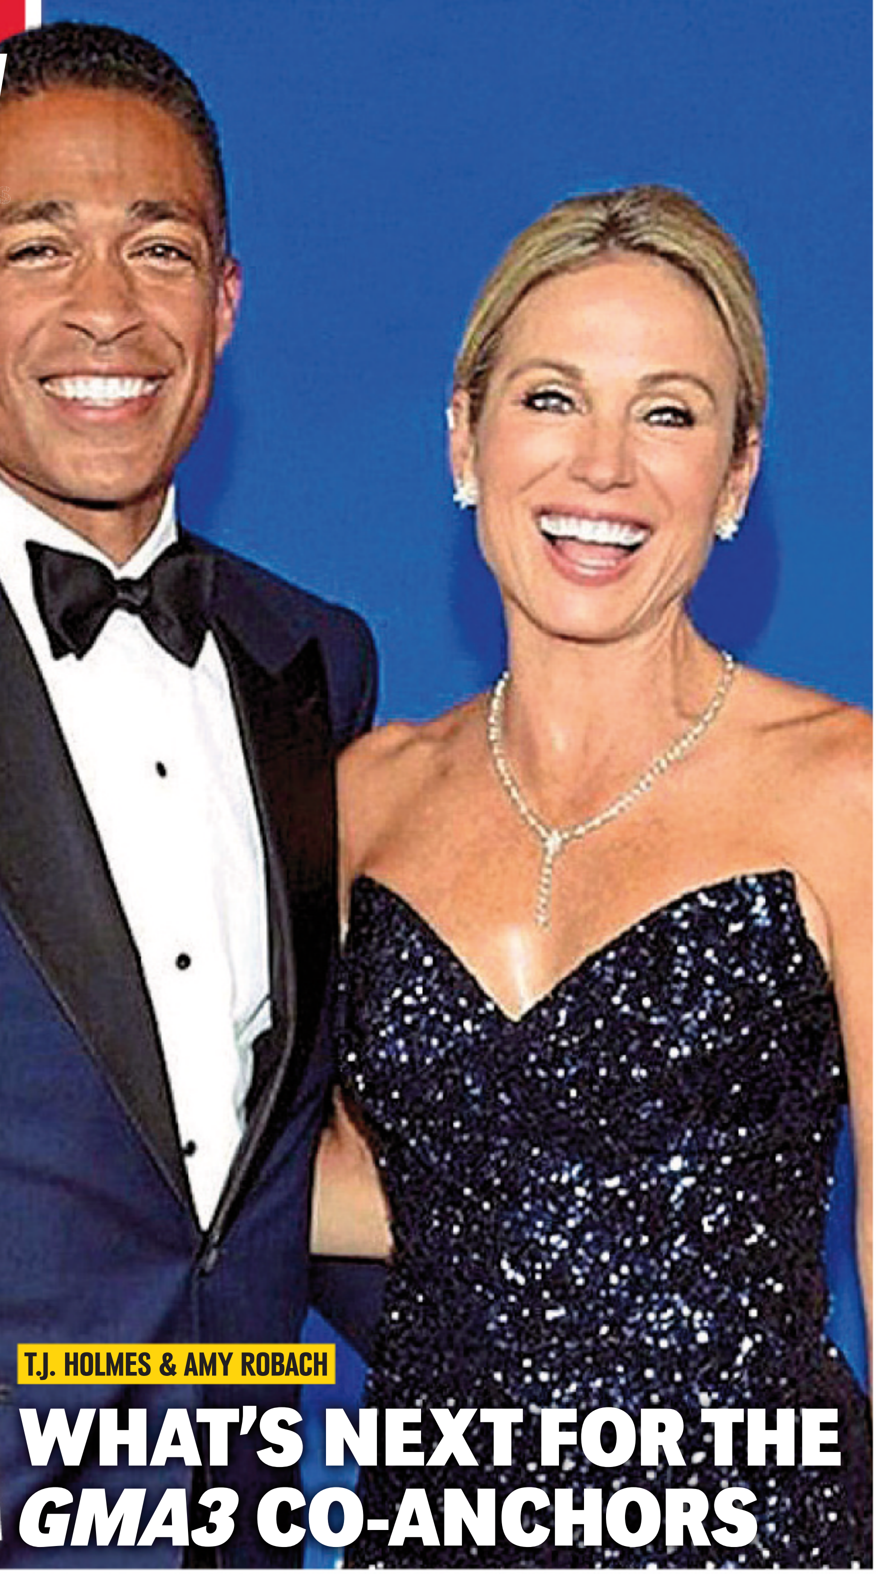
Amy and her ex, actor Andrew Shue, are close to finalizing their split.

A month after his affair became public, T.J. and wife Marilee Fiebig filed for divorce.



T.J. HOLMES & AMY ROBACH

WHAT’S NEXT FOR THE GMA3 CO-ANCHORS

Nearly two months after ABC pulled Amy Robach and T.J. Holmes off the air, the GMA3 co-anchors remain on hiatus. While a decision has yet to be announced, “it’s not likely that either of them will return to the show,” says a source. “It’s sad because at first everyone thought their jobs really could be salvaged,” including Amy, 49, and T.J., 45, who ignited a firestorm when they were photographed on romantic dates while they were still married to their spouses. Since then, the network has also been investigating claims that T.J. has been intimate with other co-workers. “Their biggest mistake was being naive that their little office romance, even though they both say their marriages were over, could blow up like it has,” says the source. “They clearly didn’t think it through.” For now, they are taking things one day at a time. “The publicity and scrutiny have taken a toll. So they’re lying low.”

PRINCESS KATE

Kids Around

Play date! On Jan. 18, the Princess of Wales couldn't mask her excitement while visiting the Foxcubs Nursery in Luton, England. She made crafts with the kids and shared her message about the importance of early childhood to lifelong outcomes. "We have to do everything we can to nurture our children and those who care for them," Kate says. "I am determined to do everything I can to secure much greater focus on those first crucial few years for the youngest members of our society. They are, after all, our future."

SUSAN SARANDON & RICHARD GERE

Two of a Kind

"I just love Richard. We go way back," shared Susan at an NYC screening of their new rom-com Maybe I Do — the third time the duo have starred together following Shall We Dance? and Arbitrage. "I knew once he was cast, I would be safe and that I would have a good time," she explained. "So I thought, why not [do it again]."

THE GMA CREW

Strikes a Pose!

"I love entertaining," enthused D.J. Pierce, aka drag performer Shangela, as he showed George Stephanopoulos, Michael Strahan, Robin Roberts and Lara Spencer some of the moves from his new tour, Fully Lit. His inspiration? Competing on DWTS last season. "[It] changed my life," D.J. said. "It taught me the greatest discipline and even a greater respect for dance. And, baby, now I'm ready to turn it out!"

BENJAMIN BRATT & NATASHA LYONNE

Feel the Love

Producer Rian Johnson showed his appreciation — and affection! — for the stars of his new Peacock series Poker Face at the show's Hollywood premiere on Jan. 23. Of course, the feeling is mutual. "Rian is such an incredible filmmaker," Natasha gushed. "He's also a beautiful writer."

SHARON OSBOURNE

Shares a Laugh

"After hours at The Talk U.K.," said Sharon, who posted this silly snap with co-hosts Nicola Thorp and JJ Anisiobi on Jan. 14. The British TV personality — who exited the U.S. show amid controversy — is happy to be home again. "I needed to be back where I came from," she's admitted.

"Just saw this! Need a running mate?" Whether the headline's true or not, as far as Martha is concerned, any endeavor by her pal Snoop Dogg will get her vote of confidence. "We collaborate a lot. We have really helped each other. You learn from new friends and old friends. And I've learned a lot from Snoop."

ALI WENTWORTH & BROOKE SHIELDS

Baby Talk

At Utah's Sundance Film Festival on Jan. 31, Ali and bestie Brooke made time for a sit-down while promoting their new doc, Pretty Baby: Brooke Shields — which chronicles the actress' highs and lows. "Sometimes I'm amazed that I survived any of it," Brooke admitted. "I'm so proud of looking at my body of work and saying, 'I accomplished that. And I kept learning. And I kept growing. I'm still here.'"

ALISON ARNGRIM

Celebrates 61

Whoa, Nellie! On Jan. 18, Little House on the Prairie fans wished Alison the "happiest" for her 61st b-day. And she's more than happy with her days as the devilish Nellie Oleson. "I am so glad I didn't have the burden of having to play a "nice" person. I think it would have been exhausting!"

JOHN LARROQUETTE

Courts Laughs

While he initially "didn't like the idea of being compared to my 35-year-old, younger self," John looks to be having fun reprising his Emmy-winning turn as Dan Fielding on the set of the new Night Court. After all, he says, "I'm very old now. Three-quarters of a century. I'm sort of playing with house money from now on, regardless of what happens."

PICTURE PERFECT

TERI HATCHER & JAMES DENTON

Perfect Pair

"I will walk over hot coals to work with Teri," confessed James about his Desperate Housewives co-star, with whom he recently reunited to play a married couple on Fantasy Island. "When you hire us, you get almost 20 years of chemistry and background that you can't buy with actors you just put together for the first time. It was fun to be able to just fall right back into that with her."

"The fans of Desperate Housewives always got gypped out of us having a happily ever after," says Teri.

HENRY WINKLER

Fur the Better

Ayyy-OK. Spending some "cozy" time with his dogs Maisie and Sadie, the Emmy winner admits that a little canine companionship helps keep him young. "Children and puppies and work do that. The combination of all of that is pretty wonderful!"

KELLY CLARKSON

Gets a Lift

"Come along for the ride!" As a 40th b-day gift, the cast of The Rookie invited Kelly to make a cameo on the crime drama. "I certainly do not consider myself an actress at all, if you saw From Justin to Kelly," she quipped. "But I had to do it because, I'm not kidding, I love all of [the cast] so much."

ANGELA BASSETT

In the Pink

Before getting her Oscar nod for Black Panther: Wakanda Forever, the actress hit The Late Late Show on Jan. 18 for a chat about making movies. "I get little butterflies, but I think that's OK," Angela confessed. "It shows that you're still in love with what you do, you're still excited about it, and I don't really take anything for granted."

WILLIAM HOLDEN

A Lifetime of HEARTBREAK

THE ACTOR NEVER BELIEVED HE WAS GOOD ENOUGH TO DESERVE THE SUCCESS AND LOVE THAT CAME HIS WAY

In 1954, the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences named William Holden Best Actor for his portrayal of an embittered POW turned reluctant hero in Stalag 17. After making his way to the stage, the handsome tuxedo-clad actor picked up his Oscar and gave one of the shortest acceptance speeches in history. "Thank you. Thank you," said Bill before walking off stage.

The Illinois-born, California-reared actor spent some 60 years as one of Hollywood's favorite leading men, but the longer he spent in the spotlight, the less he wanted to be there. "When he became an established star, he had trouble coping with his success, and that's when his drinking became uncontrollable," says Michelangelo Capua, author of William Holden: A Biography.

The roots of Bill's insecurity began in childhood. "His parents were very strict and detached from him," explains Capua. Bill, the eldest of three boys, started doing radio plays as a way to overcome his shyness — but his father never respected acting as a profession, even after Paramount Pictures signed Bill to a contract at 21. "And it was definitely not a cure for shyness," his stepdaughter, Virginia Holden Gaines, tells Closer, adding that Bill never got over his discomfort. "It's a wonder he could perform as well as he did in so many films."

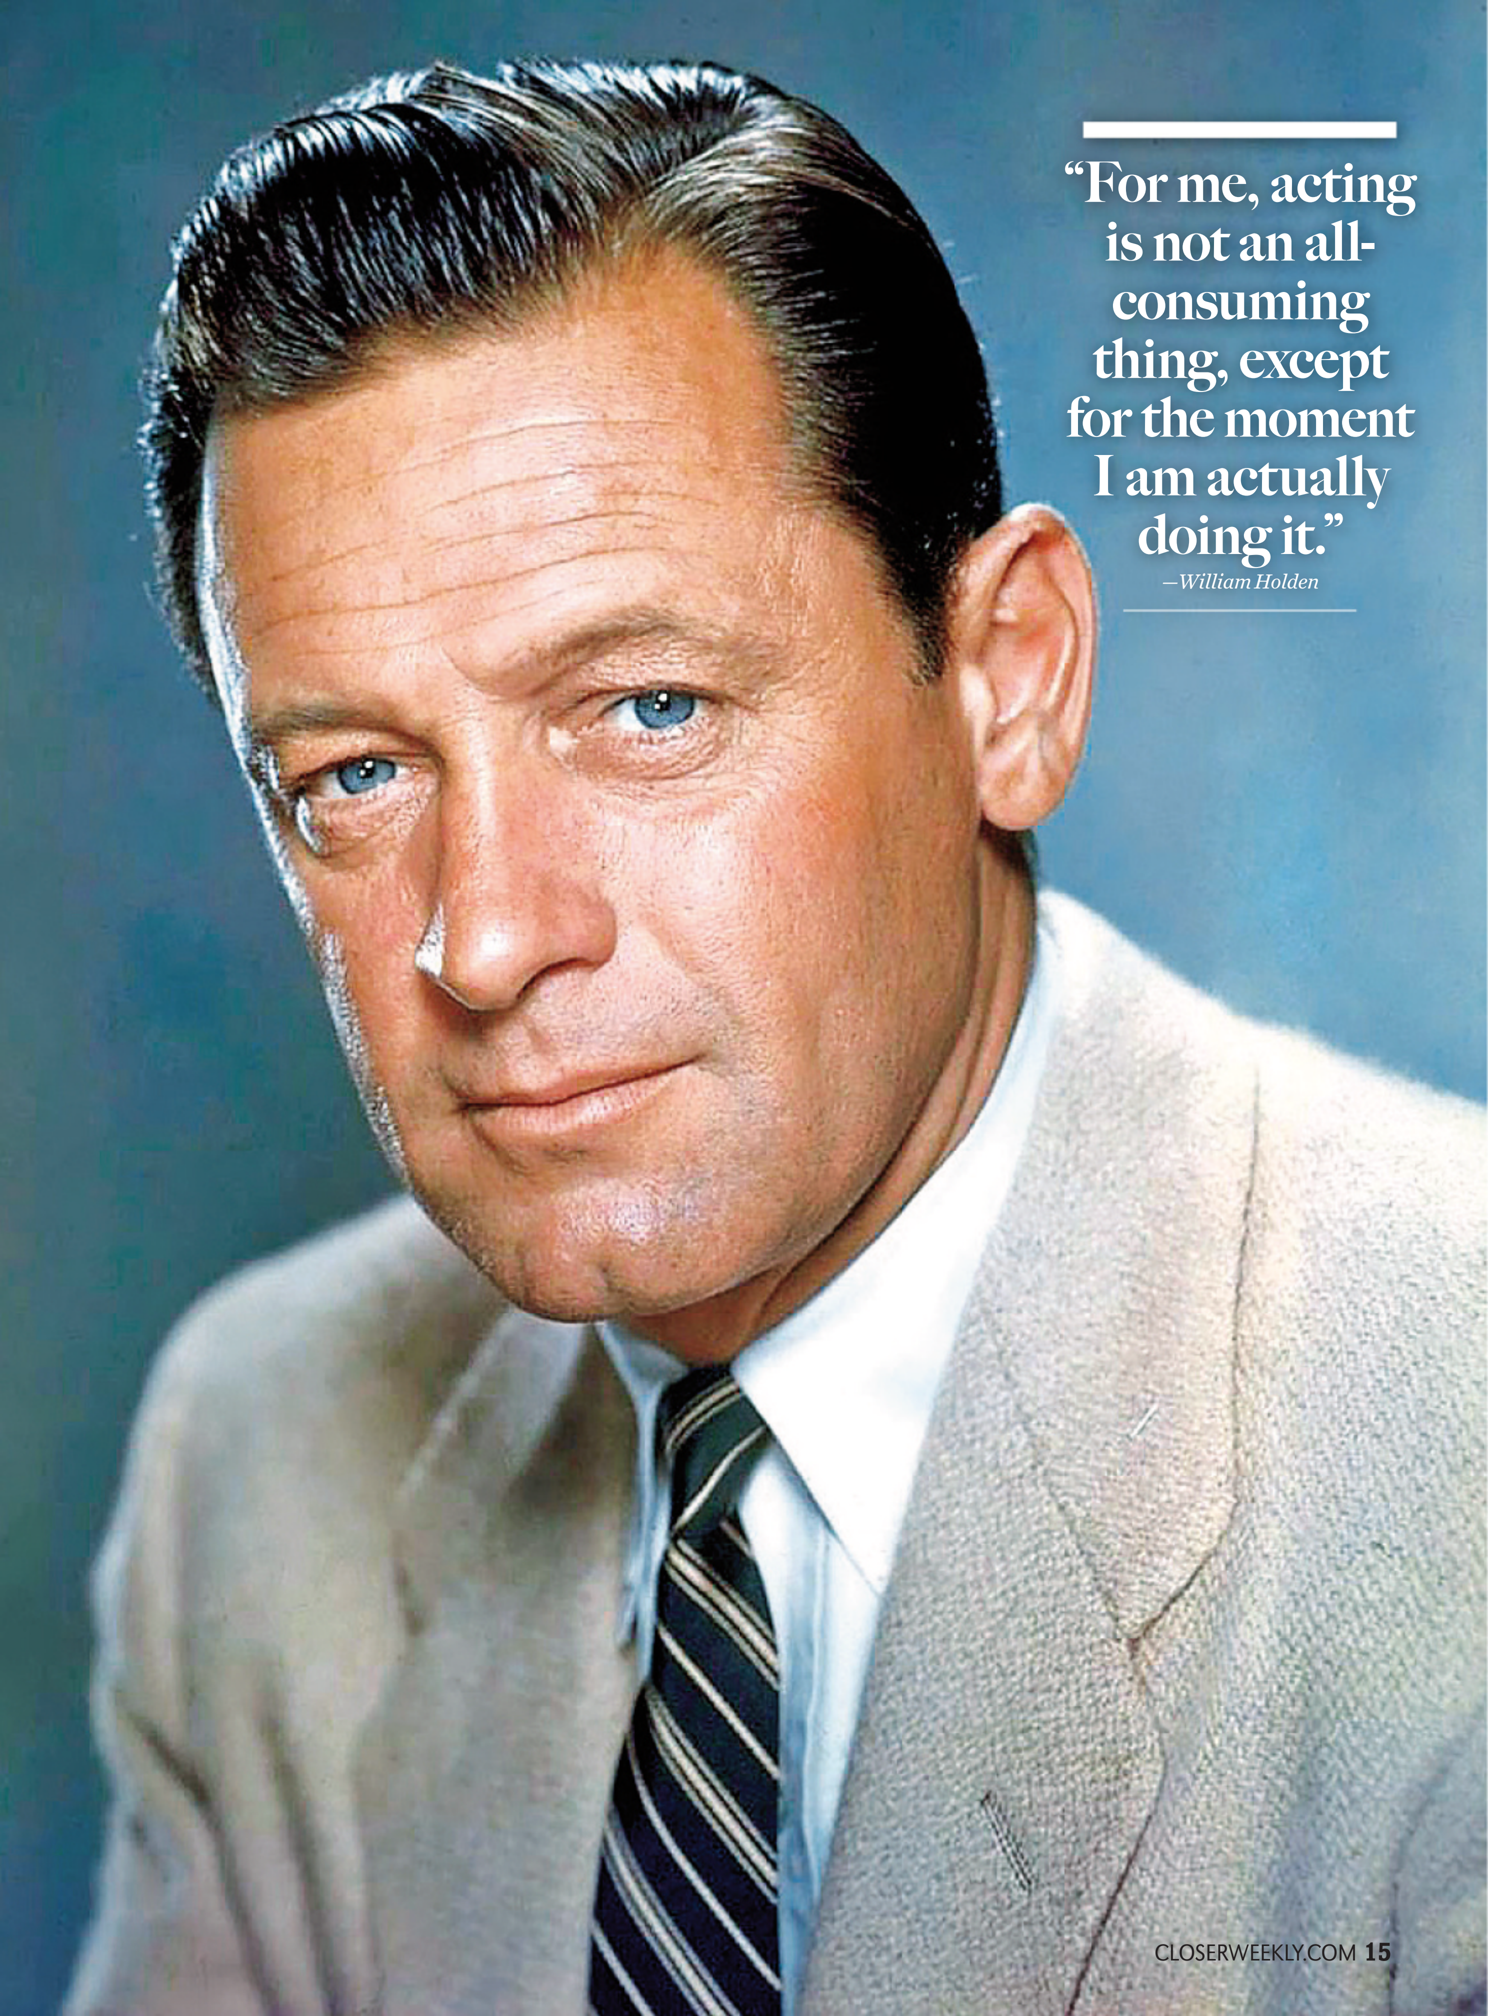
In 1941, Bill wed actress Brenda Marshall, a recently divorced beauty who used her given name, Ardis, in her private life. "He married my mother when I was 4. He was 21, and she was 24," Virginia says.

Unfortunately, the young couple's honeymoon period was interrupted by the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Like most young men of his generation, Bill enlisted, but he was disappointed to be sent to Miami to narrate training films instead of to the front lines. "He was expected to serve this way, not in action, and he could not convince anyone otherwise," recalls Virginia. Meanwhile, Bill's younger brother Robert became a Navy fighter pilot and was killed in action in a 1944 flying mission in the South Pacific. Bill never got over it.

When he returned to civilian life, he became the father of two sons with Ardis, Peter in 1943 and Scott in 1946. Sadly, he had a hard time connecting with his boys. "He was more strict with them, and the warmth he expressed toward me seemed to be missing," says Virginia. "Maybe because they were "his" and my position in the family was more tenuous? I don't know."

SUNSET BOULEVARD

Drinking alcohol had always been Bill's escape from his feelings of inadequacy. "By the time I knew him, his standard breakfast before leaving for the studio in the morning was a glass of vodka mixed with orange juice. He was too nervous for any other breakfast," recalls Virginia, who says that by the 1960s, Bill was "suffering physically" from his heavy drinking. "My mother worried and did not want him to be left alone."



> "For me, acting is not an all-consuming thing, except for the moment I am actually doing it."
>
> —William Holden

LOVE & LOSS

1. In 1950, Bill posed with his actress wife, Brenda "Ardis" Marshall, and children Scott, Virginia and Peter.

2. He and Audrey Hepburn fell in love on the set of Sabrina in 1954. They reunited a decade later for the comedy Paris When It Sizzles.

3. Grace Kelly is rumored to have been romantically involved with both Bill and Bing Crosby when they filmed The Country Girl.

4. French actress Capucine, his co-star in 1962's The Lion and 1964's The 7th Dawn, had a two-year love affair with Bill.

5. "It was very much a marriage of the soul," actress Stefanie Powers says of their nine-year romance.

Bill and Ardis' marriage also suffered. "He was a very private, secretive man. He was unable to commit to love, be truly intimate with anyone or have a real lasting relationship," says Capua. Although he and Ardis wouldn't divorce until 1971, Bill carried on a string of affairs, several of which became very serious. Audrey Hepburn, his Sabrina co-star, hoped they'd marry. "When Audrey learned he'd had a vasectomy after his second son, she called off the affair. She could not accept the idea of not having children with the man she loved," says Capua.

Likewise, his two-year relationship with French actress Capucine was more than just a fling. "She tried to help him cope with the alcohol problems," says Capua. "He loved her very much."

The star of classic hits, including Sunset Boulevard and The Bridge on the River Kwai, also sought help for his alcoholism on his own. "He was in Alcoholics Anonymous for two years. He was doing well, but then he slipped," recalls Virginia.

A GIFT TO THE FUTURE

Stefanie Powers, the star of TV's Hart to Hart, was Bill's last love. "For six of the nine years we were together, he was sober," Stefanie, who began dating Bill in 1972, tells Closer. "It was the longest period of time in his adult life that he was sober. It was very meaningful."

Bill still acted in films — his final movie, S.O.B., premiered a few months before his death — but he felt happier and healthier away from the spotlight. "He was an inveterate traveler," says Stefanie, who notes how Bill became deeply committed to conservation efforts in Africa in his last decades. "Wildlife has fascinated me as long as I can remember," he wrote. "To a first-time visitor [to Kenya], there is magic at night when every tree becomes an elephant and every rock a rhino."

Sadly, Bill bled to death after hitting his head in his apartment during a drinking binge in Nov. of 1981. "He went to rehab several times, but you can only be saved by your own will," says Capua. "Even the love and devotion of a strong woman like Stefanie wasn't enough. You have to eradicate your demons yourself, and Bill was never able to do that."

His legacy still lives on in The William Holden Wildlife Foundation, which teaches good ecological practices to local populations in Kenya. "After all of his star-studded career, it's funny that he should be remembered as "The William Holden," says Stefanie. "It would certainly have made him laugh, because he had a great sense of humor."

Hollywood's NAUG

SEX, SCANDAL & BAD BEHAVIOR THRILLED AUDIENCES IN THE YEARS BEFORE MOVIE RATINGS!

BABY FACE

After years of being pimped by her father, Barbara Stanwyck's character Lily arrives in New York and begins sleeping her way to the top of a banking institution. "You must use men. Not let them use you," she says in this scandalous 1933 film that led to stricter censorship rules in Hollywood. A young John Wayne plays one of her many lovers!

RED DUST

"Don't mind me, boys. I'm just restless. I guess I'm not used to sleeping nights," purrs Jean Harlow, playing a prostitute engaged in a love triangle with Clark Gable's plantation owner and Mary Astor's adulterous young bride in this 1932 melodrama set in steamy Indochina. In one very sexy scene, Jean's vixen takes refuge from the heat by bathing in a rain barrel. Fun fact: In 1953, Clark starred in Mogambo, a tamer remake of Red Dust.

I'M NO ANGEL

Cary Grant is one of the naive young men who fall prey to Mae West's bawdy circus performer in this 1933 film. "It's not the men in your life that counts, it's the life in your men," quips Mae, who wrote the script dripping with provocative dialogue and suggestive musical acts. Moralists were outraged, but it was the biggest hit of the year.

HTIEST MOVIES

THREE ON A MATCH

Bette Davis, Joan Blondell and Ann Dvorak play three childhood best friends who risk bad luck by lighting their cigarettes together during a reunion. Before the film is over, one of them will experience adultery, drug addiction, debauchery, child endangerment and, ultimately, self-sacrifice in this fast-paced 1932 melodrama. Bonus: Keep an eye out for a pre-fame Humphrey Bogart playing a mobster for the first time.

THE PUBLIC ENEMY

James Cagney allegedly dodged real bullets filming the ambush in this 1931 crime saga, but it's the scene where he assaults Mae Clarke with a grapefruit that shocked audiences. The movie made him a household name.

DESIGN FOR LIVING

"A thing happened to me that usually happens to a man!" declares Miriam Hopkins, whose free-spirited Gilda finds herself falling for Gary Cooper's artist George and Fredric March's playwright Tom in this 1933 comedy. Instead of choosing, Gilda opts to live with both men — platonically, at first— but before long they discover that three's company!

GOLDDIGGERS OF 1933

Joan Blondell and Ginger Rogers star in the eye-popping musical about three out-of-work showgirls seeking salvation (and a good tune) during the Depression. The musical number "Pettin' in the Park" includes the lyrics "Struggle just a little. Then hug a little.... Maybe this is wrong, but, gee, what of it?" In another number, Ginger sings, "We're in the Money," surrounded by scantily clad showgirls.

Reese Witherspoon and Ashton Kutcher enjoy a little pillow talk.

Finding Her Place

Love is all around, but in the rom-com Your Place or Mine, it may be where you least expect to find it. When LA single mom Debbie (Reese Witherspoon) and her NYC best friend Peter (Ashton Kutcher) swap homes for a week, they get a deeper look into each other's lives — and hearts. Reese fell in love with her character from the start. "I felt like she was an old friend I had known forever," the actress admits. "Feeling vulnerable about getting older, wanting to reach for her dreams, but always playing it safe so she doesn't get hurt. [The movie is] a love letter to single moms everywhere. Even if your life didn't perfectly work out the way you envisioned, there's hope and there's joy."

TUNE IN! Your Place or Mine premieres Friday, Feb. 10 on Netflix.

OUT FRI. 2/10

Salma Hayek getting ab-sorbed in her role

Magic Touch

"Everybody is like, 'Less character, more dancing.' So I've listened,'" says Channing Tatum about returning to his role as dancer Mike Lane in Magic Mike's Last Dance. The film follows the now-broke bartender as he travels to London to put on a once-in-a-lifetime show — all with the support of a new partner, played by Salma Hayek. For the actress, joining the franchise was a no-brainer. "You know what was my day going into the office? I would just sit around and watch, like, 12 men, semi-naked dancing and doing pirouettes," says the star. "And I got to boss them around!"

WHAT SHE'S DOING: Starring in the new comedy series Not Dead Yet as Nell Serrano — an obituary writer who gets life advice from the dead people she's writing about.

WHAT SHE'S DONE: Saw her life change during five seasons on Jane the Virgin. "It taught me about myself," said Gina. "Jane is the love of my life. This experience was [just that]."

TUNE IN! Not Dead Yet premieres Wednesday, Feb. 8 at 8:30 p.m. ET on ABC.

THIS AFRICAN COUNTRY INVITES VISITORS TO MEET THE WORLD'S MOST MAGNIFICENT CREATURES

"One of my all-time favorite trips was a photo safari in Kenya," shares Grey's Anatomy alum and lifelong animal lover Kate Walsh. "It's beautiful." While seeing the "big five" African animals — lions, leopards, rhinos, elephants and African buffalos — is part of most game park adventures, Kate also delighted in seeing a wildebeest migration. "It's just unbelievably cool," she says. "The giraffes are also stunning. I think we all believe we know what it's like from wildlife documentaries, but you can't even comprehend it. To see it in real time, in real life, is just incredible." —Reporting by Katie Bruno

JEWISH ITALIAN CHICKEN NOODLE SOUP

Serves 4

- 7 cups chicken stock
- 8 oz. cooked chicken, torn by hand
- 2 medium carrots, cut into ½" rounds
- 3 celery stalks, sliced into ½" pieces
- 1 cup chopped yellow onion
- 1 russet potato, medium-diced
- 12 oz. extra-wide egg noodles or short semolina dried pasta, such as medium shells or orecchiette

1. In a 4-qt. saucepan, bring the chicken stock to a bare simmer. Season with salt — it can be slightly oversalted. Add next 5 ingredients and return to a simmer. Cover; cook until veggies are just soft, about 20 min. Remove from heat and keep covered.

2. Bring a pot of salted water to a boil; cook noodles to al dente according to the package directions. Drain and portion them into bowls—I tend to fill the bowl about halfway.

3. Ladle hot soup over noodles. Top the bowls with a sprinkle of parsley, Parmesan cheese, and several cracks of black pepper. Serve.

PER SERVING: 279 cal, 23g protein, 36g carbs, 4g fiber, 5g sugar, 5g fat

GINGER CILANTRO CHICKEN SALAD

Serves 2

2½	cups chopped romaine lettuce
½	medium head red cabbage, finely shredded
2	cups pulled chicken, cold
¼	cup chopped fresh cilantro
1	apple, grated
1	carrot, grated
1	mandarin, peeled and pulled into segments
½	cup sliced almonds
1	tbsp. sesame oil
¼	tsp. salt
1	tsp. shichimi

1. In a large bowl, toss first 7 ingredients. Add ginger-sesame dressing* and toss to coat. Place in two bowls.

2. Place a skillet over medium and add almonds. Toast, stirring occasionally, until brown at the edges, 3 to 4 min. Add sesame oil and salt; cook, stirring, 1 to 2 min. If the oil or almonds begin to smell bitter or turn black, reduce heat. Sprinkle in shichimi and stir 30 sec. more.

3. Top salads with almond mixture. Serve.

For dressing: In a bowl, whisk 1½ tbsp. toasted sesame seeds, 1½ tsp. grated ginger, 3 tbsp. each lime juice, sesame oil and olive oil, 2 tbsp. rice vinegar and 1 tbsp. tamari.

PER SERVING: 877 cal, 52g protein, 51g carbs, 13g fiber, 27g sugar, 55g fat

If you have time, bread the mozzarella a few hours in advance and store on a rack in the fridge until frying.

MOZZARELLA MARINARA

Serves 4

8	oz. square log low-moisture mozzarella
½	cup flour, plus more if needed
2	large eggs
¾	cup herbed panko bread crumbs
	Neutral oil, for pan-frying
1¼	cups tomato sauce, warmed

1. Slice mozzarella into 4 even slices.

2. Line up 3 plates. Place flour in first; gently beat eggs in second; place panko in third. Set a wire rack in a sheet pan.

3. Using the wet-hand-dry-hand method, dredge mozzarella in flour, dip in egg to coat and dredge in panko. Set on a wire rack.

4. Pour ¼" of oil into a heavy-bottomed skillet over medium-high. Heat until cheese sizzles when it hits oil.

5. Line a plate with paper towels. Cook mozzarella in batches; fry until golden brown on the first side, 2 to 3 min. Gently flip; cook until golden brown on the second side. Remove and set on towel-lined plate.

6. Ladle some sauce onto a plate and top with mozzarella. Finish with grated cheese and fresh herbs if desired. Serve.

5 WAYS TO REDUCE NECK PAIN

A FEW CHANGES TO YOUR DAILY ROUTINE CAN MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE

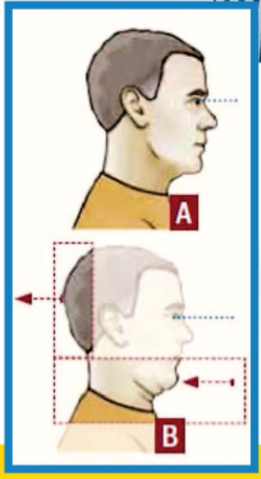
TEMP WORK: Besides taking pain relievers, the Mayo Clinic explains that a good treatment for neck pain is alternating heat and cold. "Reduce inflammation by applying cold, such as an ice pack or ice wrapped in a towel, for up to 15 minutes several times a day during the first 48 hours. After that, use heat. Try taking a warm shower or using a heating pad on the low setting."

STRETCH IT OUT: "The key to relief for a stiff neck is proper stretching and manipulation," say experts at the Cleveland Clinic. "Doing slow range-of-motion exercises, up and down, side to side, and from ear to ear, can help to gently stretch the neck muscles. Certain yoga poses can also help ease stiffness."

STAY IN TOUCH: Per Harvard Health, put less pressure on your neck with a few ergonomic adjustments. "Position your computer monitor at eye level so you can see it easily. Use the hands-free function on your phone or wear a headset. Prop your tablet on a pillow so that it sits at a 45° angle instead of lying flat on your lap." And, no matter what, don't stay in one position for too long!

RELAX A LITTLE: "Neck pain can be produced by tension in your neck muscles as a result of high stress," point out the folks at the Spine Institute of North America. So try some stress-reducing techniques such as listening to music, meditating, taking a moment to quiet your thoughts or doing "an activity that brings you joy."

SLEEP RIGHT: According to the U.K.'s National Health Service, some simple dos and don'ts at night can be of help. "When sleeping, make sure your head is [at] the same height as the rest of your body, [and] have a firm mattress. Do not sleep on your front, [and] do not twist your neck when you're in bed."



Chin tucks help improve the neck's strength and flexibility. Soothe aches with a hot/cold neck wrap ($39.99, sharperimage.com).

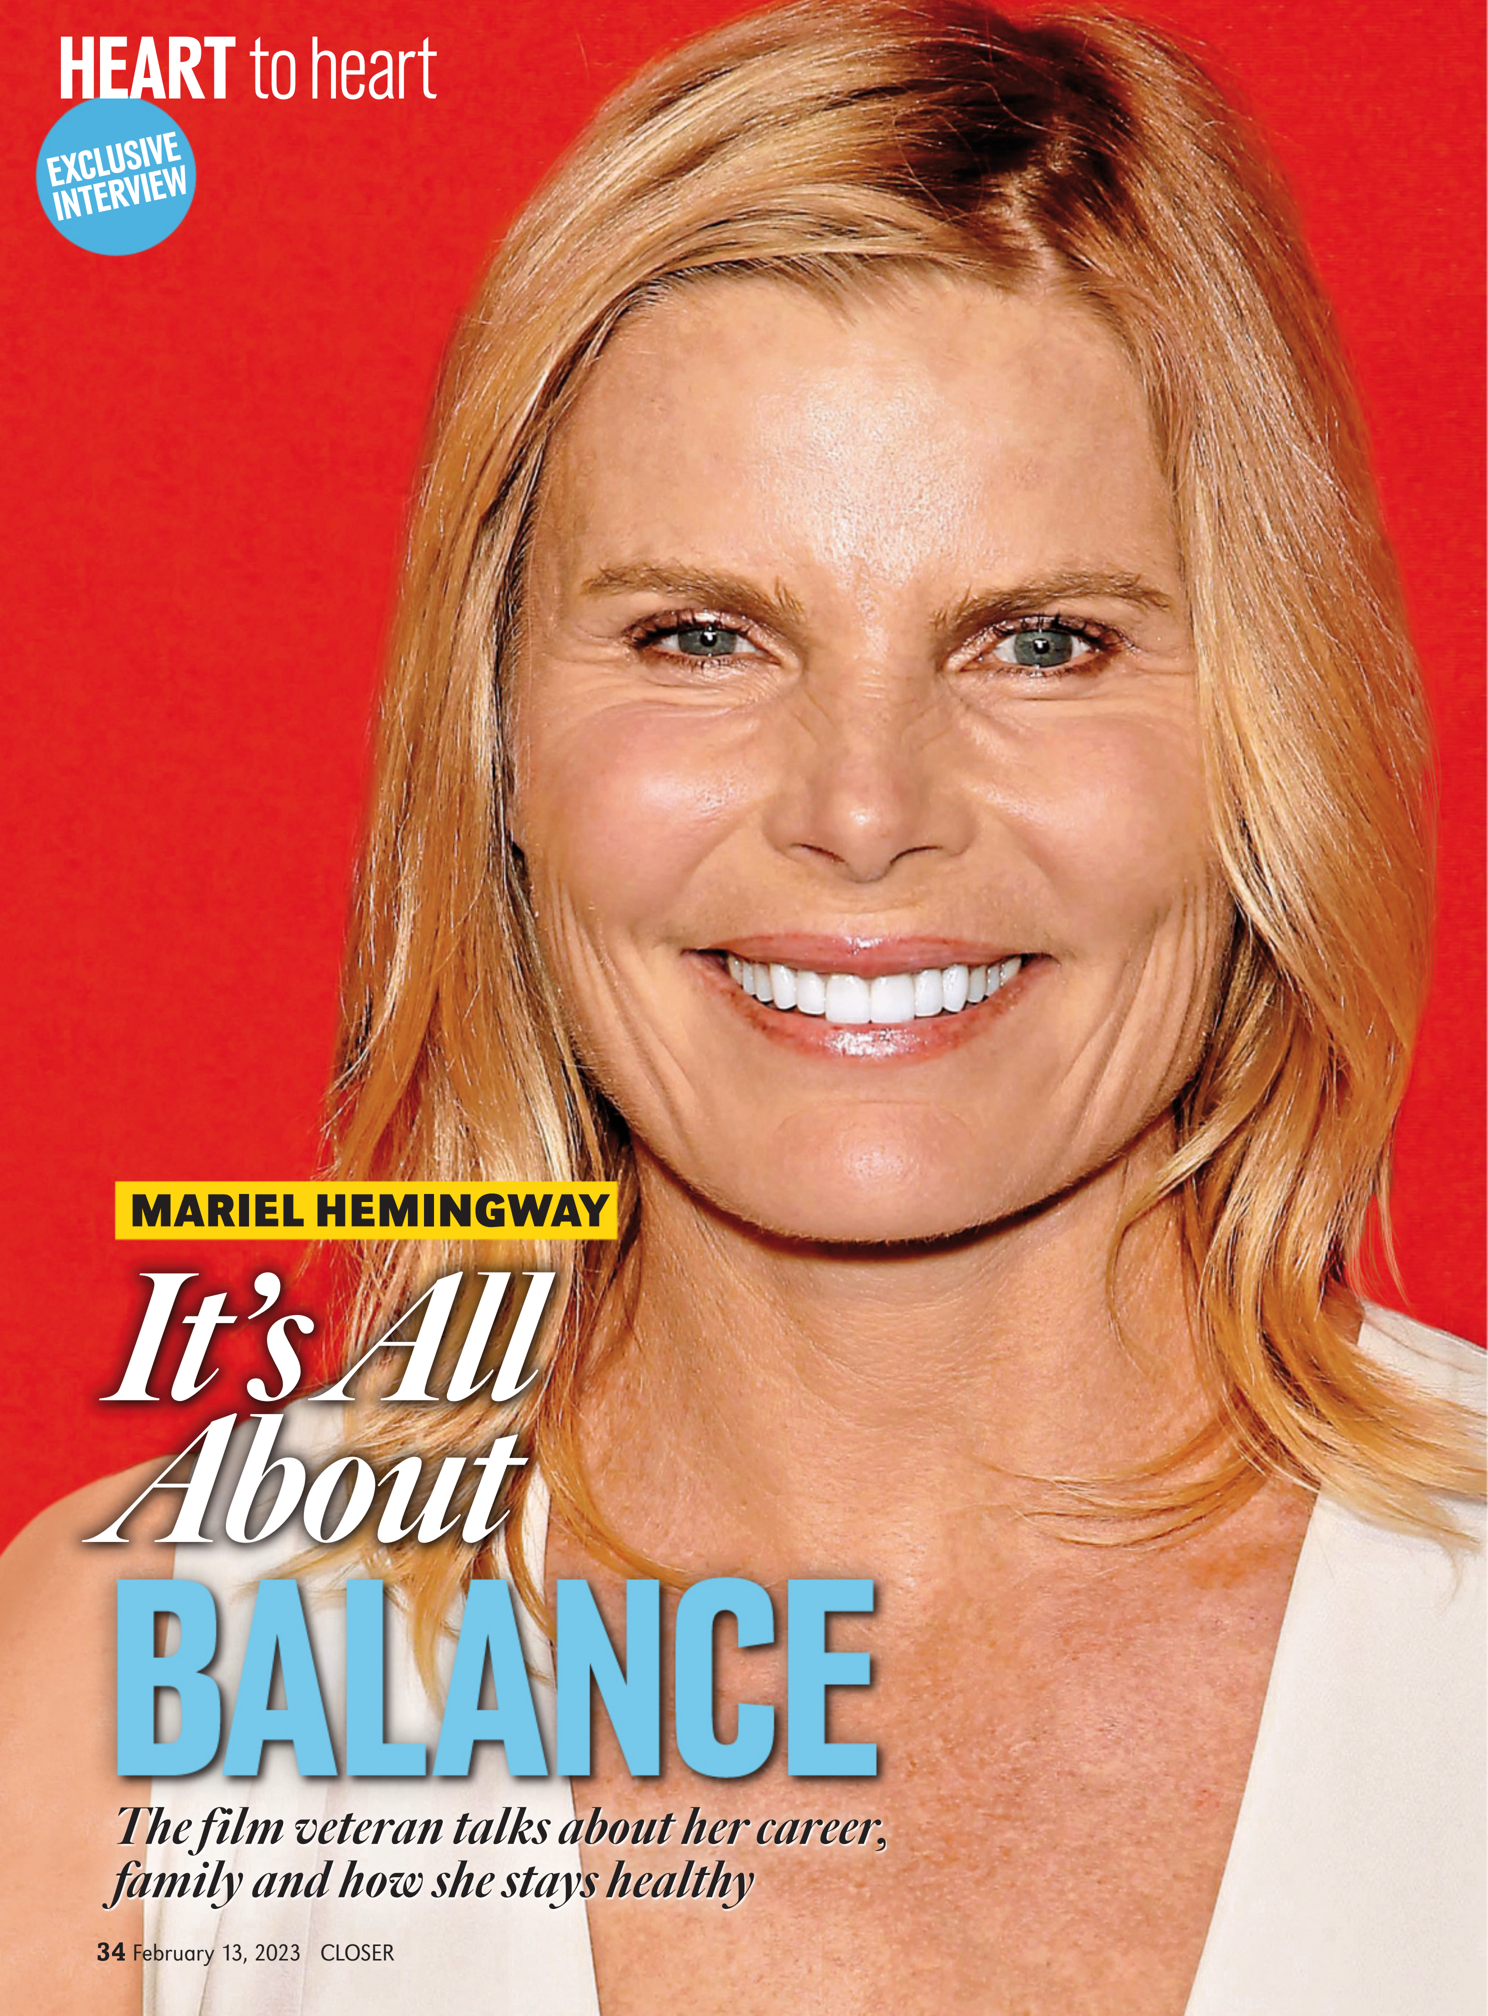
EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW



MARIEL HEMINGWAY

It's All About BALANCE

The film veteran talks about her career, family and how she stays healthy

Mariel was nominated for an Academy Award for her role in Manhattan.

Her two daughters, Dree Hemingway and Langley Fox, are both actresses.

In spite of her famous last name, Mariel Hemingway enjoyed a private, quiet childhood growing up in Ketchum, Idaho. Her teenage acting roles in 1976's Lipstick and 1979's Manhattan changed that. "It was completely unexpected," says Mariel, 61, of her sudden fame. "It's challenging to be young and be given that amount of attention and not lose yourself. But I never thought of myself as better than anybody else."

Mariel, a mother of two adult daughters, continues to act. Her latest project, On Sacred Ground, is a drama about the Dakota Access Pipeline. She's also a producer, writer, mental health advocate with the Mariel Hemingway Foundation, and the host of a weekly wellness podcast, Out Comes the Sun. "I'm very into health and wellness and reversing the aging process through lifestyle choices," she says. "I think body, mind and spirit really go together and you can't just heal one without the others."

Has being the granddaughter of Ernest Hemingway been a blessing or a challenge?

It was always a blessing. At times, it was a challenge, but only a challenge in the sense that you really had to show up — you couldn't just ride on the coattails of a name, because a name can only get you so far. You can't use somebody else's hard work to become something.

I know he died before you were born, but did his legacy have an impact on your life?

Oh, absolutely. A profound influence. When I was 11 years old, my father took me to Paris and took me around to where he was raised there [by Hemingway and his first wife, Hadley]. Even at that young age, I felt I had an affinity and understanding of him.

How did you first get into acting?

I got into acting because of my sister Margaux. She was asked to do a movie called Lipstick in the mid '70s, and she asked them if I could play her little sister. I had never acted before.

Your next big role was in Manhattan. What was filming that movie like?

I loved making that movie. I couldn't have had a better experience than I did on that film. I mean, working with Diane Keaton and Michael Murphy, it was amazing. It was magical. It's when I knew I wanted to be an actress.

Another important film was Personal Best, in which you played a track and field athlete.

Making Personal Best changed my life. I was always an athlete, but that film kind of solidified it for me. I never quit working out after that!

The film also caused a sensation because the character you played was bisexual.

The world was a different place. A lot of women came out because of Personal Best, or felt liberated because I kissed Roseanne [Barr on Roseanne in 1994]. I don't know if young people have a clue of the historical importance of some of the film and television that I did that enabled women to be themselves and show the world who they were. That was a powerful thing.

What drew you to your recent film, On Sacred Ground, about the protests at Standing Rock?

I love the producers, Rebecca and Josh Tickell, so much. I've been a longtime environmentalist. I feel like we're at a turning point in our country where we have to reexamine how we treat indigenous tribes.

You've been frank about your family history. What has helped you stay on a healthy path?

Watching a family being destroyed by alcohol, medications and drugs — I had to have a survival technique. Sometimes I was excessive, but I've learned a lot over the years. I'm fortunate to have made the choices that I've made because I think they provided me the ability to discern what's healthy for the body and the mind.

Your sister Margaux died by suicide in 1994. Were you close?

She was a lot older than me. Ours was always a little bit of a challenging relationship. Her career as a model was tough. She drank and had issues with addiction, and that made our relationship difficult. I was always scared of drinking. I'm scared of taking anything, and she kind of did all of it.

You've been with your partner, Bobby Williams, since 2009. What's your secret for happiness?

We are both incredibly independent and give one another plenty of space to be solid in our relationship with ourselves. That space creates an ongoing desire to do things, adventures and projects together.

Would you ever consider marriage again?

I would certainly love to get married but not sure when or if we will.

Your daughters are both actresses. Have you offered them any advice?

I don't know if I've ever given them advice. But if you show up loving what you do, and are kind and good to other people on sets, you'll be successful in the industry. People who have worked with both my daughters say that they're a joy to work with. It's always nice to hear that!

Were you worried about them getting into show business?

No, I know that they're strong girls. They're opinionated about things. They also know the industry has an ebb and flow — you're hot one minute and you're cold the next. It's such a ridiculous job, and yet it's a great job. So, yeah, they're pretty grounded.

What's next for you?

I just did a film called Another Country Song. It'll probably be out in the spring.

GOING INWARD

"I've meditated for 30 years," says Mariel. "I believe in embracing all forms of meditation. It's just a powerful way to become grounded, more centered and more yourself."

MARIEL'S LIFE IN THE SPOTLIGHT

BABY GIRL Mariel is the youngest daughter of Jack Hemingway, Ernest's eldest son.

FIRST FILM In the revenge movie Lipstick, she plays the younger sibling of her real sister Margaux.

BEST BET She trained extensively to play an athlete in 1982's Personal Best.

BUNNY TALE In Star 80, she told the tragic story of murdered Playboy playmate Dorothy Stratten.

> “If you want to better yourself, become a better listener.”
>
> —Mariel Hemingway

Now I play mothers and grandmothers! But that’s fine.

Anything else?

I’m producing a lot of stuff right now. I’m turning my grandfather’s book A Moveable Feast into a limited series. I’ve also got another project that’s based on my family.

You’ve written a memoir, a cookbook and some other wellness books. Do you think you will write another?

I probably will. I really think that people aren’t taught how to live properly, which is bizarre. We’ve been on the planet for millions of years, but we don’t know how to eat. We don’t know that we should exercise. We don’t know that nature is really our best source of healing and one of our best teachers. Pretty obvious things! There’s also a part of me that would like to write fiction, but it’s a little scary being a Hemingway!

—Susan Hornik

FUNNY BUSINESS “One of the movies I most loved doing was The Sex Monster,” says Mariel. “It was hilarious.”

AMAZING GRACE In 2021, she played a therapist in the drama Grace and Grit.

MARIE OSMOND

How I Learned to LOVE MYSELF

AFTER YEARS OF DOUBT AND INSECURITY, THE PERFORMER HAS FOUND HER HAPPY PLACE

At the darkest point of her life, Marie Osmond thought the world would be better off without her. "I literally almost drove my car off a cliff thinking that my life was worthless," she tells Closer, adding that a phone call from her mother, Olive, helped set her straight. "She goes, 'I'm going to tell you something I've never told anybody,'" Marie says of their conversation about postpartum depression. "I don't believe in airing dirty laundry, but I believe in sharing things that can help other people."

Marie still likes to talk about the things that have contributed to her happiness today. At 63, she's remarried to her first love, Steve Craig, and is a devoted mother and grandmother to a big clan. Her recent Christmas concert tour, in which Marie sang pop, country and opera classics, sold out. She's also proud that she's been able to keep off the 50 lbs. she lost on Nutrisystem 16 years ago. "Life is so beautiful," she says. "And your options explode when you're healthy."

Of course, losing weight and keeping it off is more challenging with age. "I feel like, as a woman, you get a different body every decade," Marie says. "Last year, I started putting on some water-retention weight around my middle area. I said, 'My body is changing again. We need a program for that.'" Nutrisystem's Complete 55 is a personalized plan that addresses a mature woman's unique metabolism and nutritional needs. "It's a real, healthy, nutritious lifestyle plan, tailored to the individual, because we're not all cookie cutter the same," she says.

Marie first went on Nutrisystem when she was competing on Dancing With the Stars in 2007. "I was calling it Dancing With the Starved," she says of her unsuccessful efforts to diet herself thin. "I was 50 lbs. overweight and in spandex — it was not attractive," adds Marie, who confides that her eldest son, Stephen, begged her to get professional help. "He said, 'Mom, you're going to die like Grandma' — because we all die early in our family from heart issues. He said, 'You've got to get the weight off.'"

A NEW FUTURE

Losing 50 lbs. on Nutrisystem opened up the world to Marie, who today enjoys camping, hiking and riding motorcycles with her husband. "It used to be so hard for me to just go up and down the stairs or get up off the floor," she says. "When you start to lose weight, you want to start moving again." Having more energy has also allowed Marie to be more spontaneous. "My husband called me yesterday and said, 'Pack a suitcase,'" she reveals. "I said, 'Where are we going?' He said, 'You'll find out. We're going on a two-week vacation.'"

For the first time, Marie welcomes surprises. "At this stage, I really love having diversity in my life," says the lifelong performer, who would like to return to Broadway someday. "I'm looking at a few things," she says. "I just love what I do and who I am." —Reporting by Amanda Champagne-Meadows

YESTERDAY & TODAY

Her mother, Olive, suffered a stroke three years before her 2004 death at 79. "She was sick. She was overweight. She couldn't do things," says Marie.

As a teenager, Marie tried every diet and starved herself down to 92 lbs., but the weight always came back. "When you start dieting as a kid, it ruins your metabolism," she says.

After Marie lost 50 lbs., she had the stamina for a Las Vegas residency with brother Donny Osmond that lasted 11 years.

"He's my best friend," she says of Steve Craig, the dad of her eldest, whom she remarried in 2011 after 25 years apart. "Neither of us was looking to remarry."

"It's so fun — and you don't have to raise them," says this grandmother of eight.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO

The Tragic Life of a SILENT SCREEN IDOL

THE ITALIAN-BORN STAR LONGED FOR LASTING HAPPINESS, BUT TRUE LOVE ALWAYS ELUDED HIM

Before he lapsed into a coma, matinee idol Rudolph Valentino made a joke to his doctor. "I'm afraid we won't go fishing together," he said.

The unexpected death of the 31-year-old silent-screen star from an uncontrolled infection rocked the world in the summer of 1926. Hundreds of New York police officers were called in to keep thousands of fans from stopping the progression of his funeral cortege to the Actors' Chapel at St. Malachy's for a Mass attended by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Gloria Swanson, among others. "People turned out, fighting just to see him one last time," says Allan Ellenberger, author of The Valentino Mystique: The Death and Afterlife of the Silent Film Idol. "We don't see that anymore."

> "I am merely the canvas on which women paint their dreams."
> —Rudolph Valentino

What set Valentino apart from other actors? "He had a certain way of looking at a woman on film," explains Ellenberger. "It was the way he treated them, too. He could be very sensual, but he could also be a little rough. I think that a lot of women found that appealing back then."

A native of Castellaneta, a city in the Apulia region of southern Italy, Valentino arrived in New York at age 18. "There were times he had to sleep in Central Park on a bench," says Ellenberger, who explains that Valentino eventually found work as a "gigolo," or taxi dancer, at Maxim's Restaurant-Cabaret. It wasn't something he was proud of. "Please, do not talk much about my dancing," Valentino said in a 1921 interview. "I never liked it, but it was the only thing I could do."

Hollywood christened him 'the Latin Lover' after roles in 1921's The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse and The Sheik made him a star, but Valentino had terrible luck in love. He impulsively eloped in 1919 with actress Jean Acker, who refused to consummate their marriage or live with him. Next, Valentino fell for Natacha Rambova, a costume designer, who despite her foreign-sounding name was born in Salt Lake City. Rambova introduced Valentino to seances — which were all the rage — and took command of his career, but her high-handed behavior hurt Valentino's reputation and got her banned from movie sets. "I think he was really in love with his second wife. Their divorce really upset him," says Ellenberger. Valentino confirmed his heartbreak. "I have often thought to myself, 'The great lover — loved by all but his loves,'" he said.

FINAL DAYS

Despite his success and penchant for flashy clothing and fast cars, Valentino was most relaxed playing with his dogs or cooking for friends. "I don't know if he was ever truly happy," says Ellenberger of the actor, who studied agriculture in his youth. "Some people said he would have been happier to have bought an orange grove and raised oranges for the rest of his life. I don't think he really cared for fame."

In August 1926, Valentino collapsed at a party and underwent immediate surgery for appendicitis and perforated ulcers. In the days before his death from sepsis, fans swarmed outside the hospital waiting for news. "I have everything — and I have nothing. It's all too terribly fast for me," Valentino once said. "A man should control his life. Mine is controlling me."

DRAMA & TEARS

The star gave what is considered his finest performance playing a Russian soldier in 1925's The Eagle.

Fans rejoiced when he returned to the big screen in The Son of the Sheik, a sequel to the 1921 film, The Sheik, which helped launch his career.

"I loved deeply," he said of his marriage to Natacha Rambova. "But in loving, I may have erred."

Actress Pola Negri claimed she was engaged to Valentino at the time of his death. She fainted in an overdramatic fashion at his funeral.

Valentino's 1926 funeral drew thousands of fans, who stopped traffic in New York City.

DOLLY PARTON

Inside My WILD & WACKY WORLD

THE BELOVED QUEEN OF COUNTRY MUSIC SHARES THE TRUTH ABOUT HER LIFE

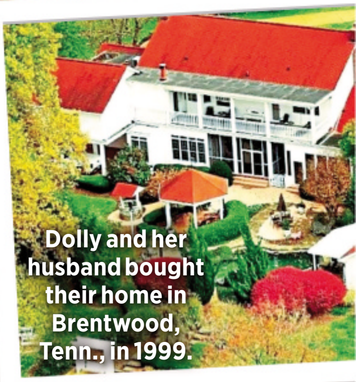
"This is just who I am," says Dolly Parton. "I may look fake, but I'm real where it counts!"

Since bursting onto the country music scene in the late 1960s, the Grammy-winning singer/songwriter with the flashy looks and down-home charm has become an American icon — and the target of a lot of rumors. "Everyone loves her, so it's only natural that there's a lot of curiosity," says a friend. "Plus, she's such a character."

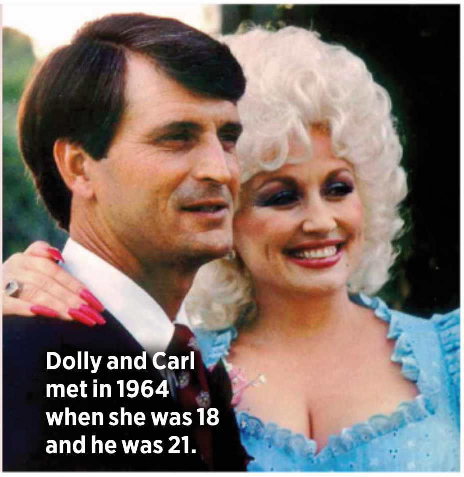
The buxom blonde, who famously patterned her vixen image after her hometown's prostitute, has always wanted to stand out. "I can't get enough rhinestones, enough color, enough gaud, because it fits my personality," she says.

Since the start, Dolly's wigs have been a big part of her look, but she wears them only when she's working. "I don't always wear them in my daily life, but I always still poof up my hair," Dolly says.

On stage, her wigs also serve a practical purpose:



Dolly and her husband bought their home in Brentwood, Tenn., in 1999.

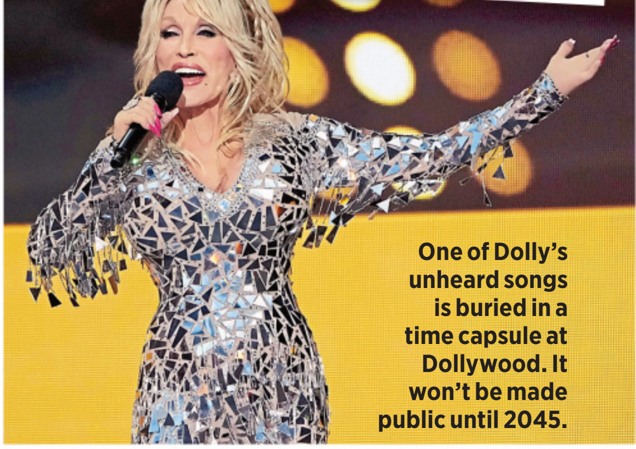


Dolly and Carl met in 1964 when she was 18 and he was 21.

▲ She names her wigs so she can quickly tell her stylist what kind of look she wants.

She's a fan of Almay mascara. "I don't think you have to pay tons of money," Dolly says.

▶ "Butterflies are my symbol," says Dolly. "As a child, I used to get lost chasing them and got my butt whipped for wandering too far off."



One of Dolly's unheard songs is buried in a time capsule at Dollywood. It won't be made public until 2045.

She can conceal her wireless microphone under the hair. "My wig cap has a little pocket," Dolly confides.

In addition to her wig collection, Dolly stores special dresses, costumes and memorabilia in her home vault. "She's not a hoarder, but she likes to keep the outfits she's worn for award ceremonies and that kind of thing," says the friend. "She also has a collection of cowboy boots."

The performer's preference for long sleeves and fingerless gloves has given rise to speculation that her hands and arms are covered in tattoos, but Dolly says that's an exaggeration. "I have a tendency to have keloid scar tissue. [My tattoos] are all pastels and they're meant to cover some scars.... But I'm not tattooed all over like a bike woman," she says.

Dolly chose images of butterflies, bows and lace for her ink. "Her tattoos are feminine, have sentimental meaning to her and are not too gauche," says her friend. As for Dolly's flesh-colored, fingerless gloves — wearing them is a way of not drawing attention to her hands. "She doesn't like them," says Dolly's creative director, Steve Summers. "It's a normal woman thing."

HOME SWEET HOME

Dolly's 54-year marriage to her seldom-seen husband, Carl Dean, has also been the subject of rumors. "Yes, it's an open relationship, but not sexually," says Dolly, who says she likes to flirt with other men but always comes home. "At the end of the day, we love each other madly," says Dolly, who recently retired from touring to spend more time with Carl, 80.

In Nashville, she might slip out to the store wearing big sunglasses, but she doesn't try to disguise herself. "It's hard for her to hide," says the friend. "Whenever she opens her mouth, you know it's Dolly! Honestly, she doesn't care if she's recognized, though. Dolly loves her fans."

But it is true that the performer once entered a Dolly Parton look-a-like contest — and lost to a drag queen! "I just overexaggerated — made my beauty mark bigger, the eyes bigger, the hair bigger, everything," Dolly says. "So I just got in the line and walked across, and they just thought I was some little short gay guy.... I got the least applause!"

BARBARA HERSHEY

MY LIFE IN 10 Pictures

GROWING UP in Hollywood, Barbara Lynn Herzstein wanted to act "as soon as I could talk." But she had to deal with one little problem: "I was petrified of people, [so] they thought I was deaf!" She would overcome her shyness and then some — becoming the personification of hippie culture during her early career, even changing her name for a time to Barbara Seagull. "I just did a lot of growing up in public," she'd confess. Fortunately, the public would eventually recognize her more as a talented actress whose strength lies in an ability to lose herself in a variety of roles. And that's just fine by her. For Barbara, who turns 75 on Feb. 5, variety is the spice of life. "I like learning. I'm not closing doors, I'm opening them."

> "I believe in age, but I don't believe in numbers."
> —Barbara Hershey

7 1996 ROLE ALONG She'd get an Oscar nod as Madame Serena Merle in The Portrait of a Lady, but insists no one role has left a lasting mark on her. "When I reach down and find [a character], the door opens, and once that door opens, you're richer as a human being. It's not like one has left an indelible impression whereas others haven't."

8 2010 OUT OF HAND "I've never had my hands on an actress as much as I had on her," shared Barbara of playing Natalie Portman's possessive mother in Black Swan. Why? "There's ownership in having your hands on someone."

1 1966 MORE TO IT While it was "a good showcase," Barbara wished she "had more training" before her break on TV's The Monroes. "Two years in high school drama taught me more about surviving than anything else. Naive was the best way to describe me…I had some unbelievable experiences in cattiness."

2 1968 DAY JOB "My first film was Doris Day's last one," remembered Barbara of her co-star in the comedy With Six You Get Eggroll. "She had grace, class and was a beautiful human. I wish my 19-year-old self knew enough to talk with her about her love of animals, which I share more and more as time goes on."

3 1972 COUPLE UP During a six-year relationship that began in '68, she'd work so much with David Carradine on pics à la Boxcar Bertha, she'd say, "I've been so tied up with David that people have forgotten that I am me."

4 1986 SISTER ACT "I had never been in a really successful film until Hannah and Her Sisters," Barbara once revealed. "There were times when I thought the business might not want me. But I didn't want to not act. What sustained me through everything, I guess, is my true love for the profession."

5 1988 FLICK OUT "They called it a 'chick flick,' which really offended me, because a movie with two men is called a film," shared Barbara of Beaches. "It showed that friendship between women is powerful and important. As the years have gone by, people keep coming up to me saying: 'I saw it with my best friend, and it changed my life.'"

6 1990 IN TOWN "It's kind of an undeniable circumstance where you have to admit what you did which is gratifying," she'd confess of winning an Emmy for her role in the miniseries Killing in a Small Town.

9 2012 DRAMA QUEEN "I like dealing with the dark side," admitted Barbara of "juicy, fun roles" such as Cora, the Evil Queen's evil mother on TV's Once Upon a Time. "The writers [there] always said that evil isn't born, it's made. [So] I always feel like a defense lawyer, because you try to find this place of empathy and figure out what changed them."

10 2021 MANOR BORN In the horror pic The Manor, she relished playing an aging dancer. "She swears, and she's fun, and she's vital, and she's angry, and she's full of life. And I loved that, that she's a whole human being… Older people can be interesting. They have more life behind them. That's all that really is going on."

Kate Hudson turned heads in a red Michael Kors Collection gown with a thigh-high slit at the Netflix Golden Globe and Critics Choice Nominee Toast. Of course, we've seen this look — and leggy pose — before. In 2012, Angelina Jolie attended the Oscars wearing a slit dress that is still spawning imitators. NEW NORDIC™

The No.1 Hair Supplement in Scandinavia

I had lost all hope but..

NOW I HAVE

HAIR VOLUME!

Catherine always had problems with her hair, so she would go to the hairdresser often for treatments. With time, this began to take a toll on her hair, and she felt she had to do something about it.

ALSO AVAILABLE AS GUMMIES

"My name is Catherine and for years, I struggled with my hair. Dull, brittle, falling out…it was just a complete train wreck. I didn't know what to do.

I READ ABOUT HAIR VOLUME™

I was sitting on the couch one night when I saw an ad about Hair Volume™, a Swedish supplement with naturally derived hair nutrients. Everything about the ad was similar to my story. Seeing that I've always been interested in nourishing my hair and keeping it heathy, I went to my local health food store and learned about the importance of supplementation. The lady at the store also recommended Hair Volume™ as her customers spoke highly of it.

FINALLY, MY HAIR FELT REJUVINATED

After a few months of taking Hair Volume™, I noticed my hair starting to feel "heavy" on top. I was shocked but happy. It looked much healthier. My daughter is a hairdresser and I went to see her three weeks ago. She was also pleasantly surprised at the state of my hair. The best part is that my husband noticed something different in my hair too! I will definitely keep taking Hair Volume and highly recommend it to anyone wanting nourished hair and more hair volume."
